Long ago, in the verdant realm of Everleaf, the Green Dragon ruled over a flourishing land of peace and prosperity. His people, the Verdans, lived in harmony with nature, drawing strength from the earth and the forests. Yet, a dire calamity loomed on the horizon—an unstoppable blight that weakened the land, draining its vitality and turning lush fields into barren wastelands.

The Verdans grew weak, their tools and homes crumbling as the blight spread. The Green Dragon, wise and compassionate, knew that his people's survival depended on strength greater than the natural elements they had relied upon for so long. In his quest for salvation, he turned to the distant Crystal Peaks, where his cousin, the mighty Pink Dragon, resided.

The Pink Dragon was renowned for his mastery over the fundamental elements, capable of forging realms from the very essence of the earth. Determined to save his people, the Green Dragon journeyed across treacherous landscapes, enduring storms and mountains, until he reached the radiant Crystal Peaks.

Upon meeting the Pink Dragon, the Green Dragon bowed low and poured out his plea. “O great Pink Dragon, my people are perishing under a relentless blight. Our lands, once vibrant, are now desolate. I implore you to lend us your strength and wisdom.”

The Pink Dragon listened intently, his heart moved by the Green Dragon's plight. He pondered deeply, then declared, "To overcome this blight, your land needs the strength of iron—a force resilient and unyielding. I shall forge a new empire, the Irony Empire, to bring fortitude and renewal to your realm."

Summoning her immense power, the Pink Dragon delved into the core of the earth, extracting the pure essence of iron. She shaped this raw force into an extraordinary empire, where iron rivers flowed and towering forges burned brightly. This Irony Empire was a realm of strength and endurance, capable of resisting even the most devastating forces of decay.

The Pink Dragon gifted the Green Dragon with the knowledge to harness this new element. He taught him how to infuse the iron into the very foundation of Everleaf—its soil, water, and even its people. With the strength of iron, the Verdans rebuilt their tools, homes, and defenses, forging a renewed land of resilience and prosperity.

The blight was driven away by the newfound strength of the Irony Empire, and Everleaf flourished once more. The Verdans, now fortified with the power of iron, thrived in their revitalized land, forever grateful to the Pink Dragon for her wisdom and generosity.
